President's Address

Following the first Members' National Forum in 2004, this event has become a mainstay in the regular ADI calendar of events, and its popularity amongst delegates and presenters continues to grow.

Again we return to Kings College University, which has proved a popular venue for the event due to the compact infrastructure and two lecture theatres. This one-day programme covers a wide selection of topics from both experienced lecturers and newcomers to the podium. The presentations will be split into two streams both covering surgical, restorative and current hot-topic themes. Two prestigious technician speakers are also included in the programme.

This year we received nearly 50 abstracts, and making the choice of which ones to ask to present was extremely difficult. Not only have we have tried to blend a range of experience, we have also asked some of those who submitted applications for the last forum but who did not present.

Previous attendees have found the forum both informative and a great place to meet with colleagues, so if you are interested in attending please complete the online registration form, or download the form and return to the ADI office either by phone or fax with full payment. We do ask that you specify which is your favoured stream, however you will have the opportunity to move around during the day.

The ADI will also be demonstrating Ark, its web-based education resource that has been uniquely created to provide foundation-level knowledge of implant dentistry. There will also be demonstrations available on the ADI's audit software Implant Logbook and on the online Members' Interactive Forum.

Also taking place will be the ADI's Annual General Meeting, where after two memorable years as President I have the pleasure of handing over the presidency to my friend and colleague Cemal Ucer. We will also announce the results of this year's regional elections.

I look forward to welcoming you to London on 12 November for what I am sure will be another successful ADI Members' National Forum.
